Subject-Verb-Object

- General word order in English and Dutch is the same:
- First the one doing it (=subject), then the action (=verb)
  - He walks hij loopt
  - I can ik kan

- More than one verb is possible
  - He has walked hij heeft gelopen
  - I can see Ik kan zien

Subject-Verb-Object

- Word order is always like that in English (not in Dutch!)
  - Then he walks — Dan loopt hij
  - Eventually I see — Uiteindelijk zie ik

- The only exception is in QUESTIONS
  - Can I? — Kan ik?
- But note:
  - Does he walk? — Loopt hij?

Word order with objects

- Sometimes a sentence also contains the thing/person undergoing the action (= object (lijdend voorwerp))
- Normal order the same in Dutch and English
  - I see him ik zie hem

- In English all the verbs are together
  - I have seen him ik heb hem gezien
  - I can see him ik kan hem zien

Word order with objects

In English the verb always comes before the object

- Because I see him — Omdat ik hem zie
- Because I have seen him — Omdat ik hem heb gezien

Also for questions

- Do I see him? — Zie ik hem?
- Have I seen him? — Heb ik hem gezien?

Where to put words ending in –ly (adverbs)

The normal place to put them is right before the verb (this doesn't work in Dutch)

- She carefully parked the car
- ~~Ze voorzichtig parkeerde de auto~~

It's also possible to put it at the end or beginning (also works in Dutch)

- She parked the car carefully
  Ze parkeerde de auto voorzichtig

- Carefully she parked the car
  Voorzichtig parkeerde ze de auto

Where to put words that indicate how often something happens

- For example: always, never, often, sometimes, usually, frequently, regularly, seldom
- Used before the verb
  - He always walks — Hij loopt altijd
  - I always see him — Ik zie hem altijd

- But after forms of ‘to be’ and after the first verb if there is more than one (same in Dutch)
  - He is always late — Hij is altijd laat
  - I can always see — Ik kan altijd zien

Where to put words that indicate how often something happens

- Do not put them at the beginning or end of the sentence like in Dutch
  - Altijd zie ik hem
  - ~~Always I see him~~
  - Ik zie hem altijd
  - ~~I see him always~~

Note

- The same rules apply to the word also.
  - He also walks — Hij loopt ook
  - I am also… — Ik ben ook…
  - I can also see — Ik kan ook zien
  - ~~Also he walks~~ — Ook loopt hij
  - ~~He walks also~~ — Hij loopt ook

- At the end, instead of ‘also’, you can use ‘too’/’as well’
  - I can see too
  - I can see as well

Place and time

Expressions of place and time

- In English expressions of place come before expressions of time

(also possible in Dutch) place> time

  - I am flying to London tomorrow
    Ik vlieg naar Londen morgen

  - I am working downstairs today
    Ik werk beneden vandaag

Expressions of place and time

- In Dutch it's also possible to switch them (but not in English)
  - Ik vlieg morgen naar Londen
  - ~~I am flying tomorrow to London~~
  - Ik werk vandaag beneden
  - ~~I am working today downstairs~~

- It's only possible if you move the time expressions to the beginning of the sentence (also in Dutch)
  - Tomorrow I am flying to London
  - Morgen vlieg ik naar London
